Book Single author	 Author    year of publication    book title (in italics)               Smith, J. D. (2009). Research ethics in New Zealand: A student guide.            Wellington, New Zealand: Rata Press.         	           When paraphrasing, you put the source information into your own words and phrases.            The author's name can appear outside the brackets, incorporated into the sentence:              According to Smith (2009, p. 22) the best source of ...              Or it can appear inside the brackets:              ... was the case (Smith, 2009, p. 22)              It is not compulsory to include page numbers when paraphrasing, but they can be included if you want to refer to a specific part of the source.              If you are including a direct quote, the quote must be included in quotation marks, and page numbers are essential. Paraphrasing is generally recommended over direct quotations.              "The best source of information is your local library." (Smith, 2009, p. 25)
