Without reflection,
practice becomes
a routine of
mindlessness

Reflection is

‘a fusion of sensing, perceiving, intuiting and thinking related to a specific experience in order to develop insights into self and practice.

It is vision driven, concerned with taking action towards knowing and realising desirable practice.’

More than self reflection...

Perception is a filter between the reflective practitioner and the performance.

Getting things into perspective

Perception is an important part of reflection. What is the context within which we view the world?

'experience is never innocent'

Reflective learning in supervision: The Shift

Shifting thinking from what supervisors want to teach

to what the supervisees want to learn

shifts from a teacher centred

to a

learner centred approach

The Shifts for the supervisor

From:

- A teacher to a facilitator
- Expert to a co-explorer
- Didactic to relational
- Providing answers to asking questions
- Focus on 'doing' to a focus on 'thinking'
- Position of knowing to a position of curiosity and openness to other possibility

Critical reflexivity

involves the practitioner-knower in the process of making explicit the knowledge that is implicit in action so that it becomes available for both critique and enquiry. The effort called for includes, but goes well beyond, the task of outcome evaluation.

Hewson and Carroll advise:

- 'pause to notice and then consider what you have noticed'
- 'notice how the problem has been framed'

Hewson and Carroll (2016)

A Davys NMIT 2024

12

12

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

And.....:

- 'hunt down and challenge deepest assumptions' (p.113)
- 'embrace uncertainty and be willing to be unsettled' (p, 191).

Hewson and Carroll (2016)

A Davys NMIT 2024

13

13

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

When considering reflection in these ways it can be challenging and unsettling.

One of the supervisor's key roles is to unsettle and disturb in order that learning can take place.

As supervisors we manufacture uncertainty.

At the same time we need to ensure that there is a safe, negotiated and supportive supervision relationship in place.

"Staying with disequilibrium is an important element in learning from experience, but does require some degree of psychological safety to stay with the discomfort"

(Carroll 2014, p. 126)

A Davys NMIT 2024

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

"Learning

is and should be, on some occasions, a disturbing and unsettling process. If the learning process is intended to be transformational, then there must be a period when the participants are unsettled, wondering and challenged".

A effective reflective supervisor

Is:

- compassionate,
- tolerant,
- non-judgmental,
- self-reflective,
- reliable,
- predictable.

The agenda determines the content and focus of supervision so..

it is important that adequate time is given to the setting of the 'agenda'.

A common problem

How do we ensure that supervisees get what they want from supervision?

Identify what the supervisee wants:

- Why is he/she bringing this issue to supervision?
- What outcome does he/she want from supervision regarding the issue?
- How will the supervisee know he/she has got what he/she wants?
- What does the supervisee want/not want from you, the supervisor?

Reflection and Practice

- Supervisees are not only encouraged to identify their reflection and learning but also to take responsibility to put that learning into practice.
- 'Reflection becomes reflective practice when the critical reflection shapes future practice' (Scaife, 2010, p. 2).
- 'Learning in supervision is ultimately transformative and not just transmissive' (Carroll, 2014, p. 19).
- One of the acid tests of the effectiveness of supervision is 'What are you (the supervisee) doing differently now that you were not doing before supervision?' (Carroll 2010, p. 1)

Good supervision is about asking good questions

Who we see
in the reflective mirror of supervision
and what we learn
will depend on what questions we ask
and how we frame those questions
